Dear Caul,

Re: Your Appeal

I was pleased to meet with you at the prison last Friday. We discussed various matters and we outlined in some detail the circumstances leading up to your conviction.

You were sentenced to eight years for supplying 44 kg of Cannabis.

You represented yourself at that trial, running a defence of justification. Having perused all of the papers in your case, which I return to you, I am afraid to say that I am of the same opinion as the Judge at your trial.

I have considered your papers carefully but as you have been told before, there is no defence of justification in English law. You have, I am afraid, misinterpreted the law in this area and the Judge was correct on directing the jury that you should be convicted.

As regards to your confiscation hearing; unless you are able or willing to pay back some or all of the monies it is alleged you made during the course of your criminal activities, you will have to serve an additional sentence.

Whatever sentence you get, you will have to serve the entirety of that sentence in custody. That could in theory add significantly to the sentence you serve.

I wish you well with your appeal.

Yours sincerely,
